

How to read your account statement

There are two types of accounts at Manulife Wealth, which determine the reporting you'll receive. If you have a nominee account, you'll get a Statement of Account for investments held with Fidelity Clearing Canada on your behalf.

If you have a client name account, you'll get a Report on Client Positions held outside of Fidelity Clearing Canada ULC, which will be assets held directly at the fund company.

Both statements provide investment information, including Portfolio Summary, Account Holdings, and Account Activity. The following is an overview of these sections and details you should know.

3 Portfolio Summary

A clear view of your accounts is included in the statement, as well as a comparison of the total asset value between the previous and current reporting periods. These values are provided as both consolidated amounts of total assets of all accounts and separately for each account reported in the statement.

You may find both Canadian and U.S. currency accounts reported on the same Statement of Account. Each account reports the value in the respective currency. The consolidated value is reported in Canadian currency.

4 Asset Allocation

The investments held in your accounts reported in the statement are grouped by the asset class they belong to. Common asset classes you may find are cash, equity, fixed income, and mutual funds. This information allows you to see the percentage of your investments allocated to each asset class.

5 Account Holdings

Securities held in your accounts reported on the statements will be listed in the Account Holdings section. Holdings are grouped by account and asset classes. Each holding will report Quantity, Cost, Current Price (to three decimal places), and Current Market Value. For some holdings such as fixed-income investments, accrued interest is also reported.

Subtotals are provided for every asset class and account, in addition to a Grand Total and currency totals, if applicable.
